IMMODEST DANCES ARE ALSO CENSURED BY NATIONAL FEDERATION TODAY.

PASS OFFICIAL STATE

Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker Re-elected President Following Nomination by Committee.

Chicago, June 15.—At the session today of the National Federation of Women's Clubs in biennial convention, resolutions were adopted protesting against suggestive stories in magazines and pledging members of the federation to subscribe for only those publications whose columns are clean. Another resolution was passed censuring immodest forms of dancing.

Election On Tuesday.
Nominations headed by Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas, for reelection as president and others, for the absence of nomination from the floor are equivalent to election, were made today by delegates to the convention of the National Federation of Women's Clubs in biennial convention at the hotel here.

The broads of the suffragist was made today at today's session of the Miss Mary Garrett Hay of New York was nominated as the director. Rules and regulations for the balance of tomorrow were accepted. They include instructions as to silence and provide that there shall be no clapping.

The state of the nominating committee of the general federation of women's clubs prepared to be presented today, was headed by the name of Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas, who was to be offered the traditional second term. Mrs. Samuel B. Smith of Ohio, was named to succeed Mrs. L. B. Blandburg of Philadelphia who served two terms of first year president.

Mrs. E. Riley of Charlotte, North Carolina, was slated for second vice president, and Miss Georgia A. Baker of Massachusetts was elected for corresponding secretary. Other officers named were the incumbents standing for reelection, except two directors: Miss Mary Garrett Hay of New York City and Mrs. W. Brook Young of Jacksonville, Florida.

Home Economics and Public Health were the subjects of the day sessions, outlined in the problem of eugenic sanitation, pure food legislation and compulsory education. Among the leading topics Miss Lathrop, head of the children's bureau department, gave strong pleas for compulsory registration of every birth.

Legal records of birth is the only means of preserving the lives and rights of children, and no American baby should be deprived of that report. Only by prompt registration can nurses and doctors discover the child who needs care. It is only thus we can stamp out blindness of the newly born.

"Between sixteen and eighteen percent of babies born in the past two years have been deprived of what advantages they might have had by prompt legal registration of their birth," said Miss Lathrop.

Protect the Babies.
"We have no knowledge of country-wide infant mortality," said the bureau has estimated it at 300,000 annually."

Miss Lathrop urged the delegates to plan to have a meeting of every club within the next six months, at which they would act on to protect the babies of their own community.

Dr. Charles Rockville of Cincinnati urged the women's clubs to work for playgrounds and breathing spaces in residential districts. He said that this would be the most important work the women's clubs could do.

Demand that certificates of freedom from communicable diseases should accompany every application for a marriage license was formulated in a resolution submitted today by Mrs. S. S. Crockett.

Prohibitionists Declare That Liquor
Question Will Be At Stake in 1916 Campaign.

Clinton, Mo., June 15.—Predictions that the national political campaign in the United States would be fought out on a "wet" and "dry" issue, and that the year 1920 would see the White House, were made by H. T. Saris of Clinton, treasurer of the national prohibition committee. "We must show the people," said Mr. Saris, "that there is folly in attempting the hopeless task of getting both houses of congress and the state legislatures to give us a constitutional amendment, when most members of congress and the legislature are elected and controlled by the demonized rum power in politics."

ITALIAN STRIKERS DESPOIL CHURCHES

Many Edifices Burned and Robbed
During Recent Riots, Says Reports to Pope.

Rome, June 15.—Churches suffered very severely during the riot accompanying the recent general strike in Italy, according to reports presented to the Pope today. These show that fourteen churches were burned, thirty-nine damaged, and twenty-three churches looted.

Work was resumed generally today at Ravenna, Forlì, Cesena, Rimini, Lugo, Sanza and Parma. In other parts the authorities were gradually succeeding in restoring order.

Fire Bologna Cathedral.
Bologna, Italy, June 15.—Rioters today set fire to the Cathedral, the Church of Peace and the church of the Holy Cross, in Bologna, on the Adriatic, after drinking the doors with petroleum stolen from a store.

Cavalry arrived in time to prevent the destroying of the Cathedral, but the interior of the other churches was looted and the walls remained standing of the church of the Holy Cross.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON IS DEAD IN CHICAGO

Vice-President Under Cleveland Expires Early Sunday Morning
After a Long Illness.

Chicago, June 15.—Adlai E. Stevenson, vice president of the United States through the second Cleveland administration, died here at 1 o'clock Sunday morning at a hospital after an illness of several months. His three children were at his bedside when death came unexpectedly.

Mr. Stevenson was 73 years old. His last illness followed a five months' vigil at the bedside of his wife, who died about six months ago. Mr. Stevenson suffered a nervous breakdown, and a month ago he came to Chicago from his home at Bloomington, Illinois, for treatment. His condition gradually became worse and he entered a hospital. The burden of his years and the oppressive heat of the last week contributed to the fatal termination of his illness.

SAVED FROM GALLOWS MAN IS AGAIN ON TRIAL

Denver, June 15.—Saved from death when he was in the very shadow of the gallows, Oscar Cook, once convicted of murdering a patrolman, was today brought on a second trial in the criminal court.

After waiting a year and a half for death in the county jail here, Cook was saved by the Supreme court of the state recently when the verdict of guilty was set aside on technical grounds.

On March 19, 1912, Cook and Edward McPherson were alleged to have entered the saloon of A. J. Lloyd, in Valverde, intending to hold the place over. Lloyd resisted and was shot down. McPherson was also slain.

CLAIMS TITLES ARE OBJECT OF TRAFFIC

German Socialist Leader Alleges Traffic in Titles in Germany—On a Commission Basis.

Berlin, June 15.—Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader and member of the Reichstag whose revelations last year resulted in the conviction of a number of high officials and army officers of bribery, has again unearthed again that are engaging the attention of the prosecuting attorney and seem likely to result in criminal prosecution.

Liebknecht charges—and supports his charges with strong evidence—that trafficking in titles on a commission basis is carried on in Prussia, and that the titles are, or were, up to two years ago, granted for money consideration. The minister of education has made a public denial of the latter part of the accusations, denying that titles, at least, that of professor, are not sold for money.

He has, however, directed an investigation of the other charges, and it is now under way. Liebknecht tried to make his disclosures in the Reichstag on the army trust, but was ruled out of order by the speaker. Two or three days later he published the first in a series of articles in the Vorwaerts, the central organ of the Socialist party. It had to do with the late General von Lindenau, one of the most distinguished military men in the empire. Von Lindenau was for a long time chief of the Great General staff, he was appointed governor of Metz shortly before his death, and it is declared that he might have become Prussian war minister had he lived.

He enjoyed the especial confidence and esteem of the Emperor. Liebknecht published extracts from official documents showing that the general left debts exceeding $350,000, which he could not pay. He also published a copy of a letter from the general to a certain physician, acknowledging the receipt of a large sum of money, "to be repaid in case you do not receive the title of professor within one year."

In a further article, Liebknecht declared that von Lindenau had for years dealt in orders and titles. The non-Socialist press found it impossible to deny the probative force of Liebknecht's documents, but declared that the case was "a solitary sad instance."

Thereupon Liebknecht published a facsimile of a letter from von Lindenau to an unnamed physician, dealing with the obtaining of the title of professor for the latter. In this letter, written more than two years ago, Ludwig declared that the matter was difficult and expensive, and that he could not receive the title for less than 10,000 marks, higher for Jews than for Gentiles.

AMERICAN THREE RACING YACHTS IN Daily Tests to Pick Defender to Meet Lipton's Shamrock.

New York, June 14.—With the three American cup defense yachts, Resolute, Vanitie and Defiance, engaged in almost daily test races and Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger Shamrock IV preparing to sail for America, interest in the coming contest is increasing rapidly. The status and racing ability of the three American sloops are fairly well established but the full possibilities of the Shamrock IV are not known until she has been put to the test. HEAVY REBEL LOSES IN ZACATECAS FIGHT

Mexico City, June 15.—Telegraph reports received at the capital today from Zacatecas say that the losses of the constitutional forces in the battle at that place are estimated at 3,000. In General Barron's official report of the battle to the war office he says that after an eight-day battle the constitutional forces were repulsed by him and by General Arguendo.

The federals, according to the report, captured several machine guns, many horses and a great quantity of ammunition.

Fighting at Mazatlan.—Fighting about Mazatlan continues. According to reports today from Rear Admiral Alvarado, the constitutional forces keeps up a consistent bombardment, which is answered by the federal troops within the city.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OF VETERANS AT EAU CLAIRE

Eau Claire, Wis., June 15.—The fifteenth annual encampment of the United States war veterans began here today to continue until Wednesday. Former members of the local company who have scattered throughout the country made the encampment a homecoming and about half the strength of the old organization was expected to attend. In addition to these there were Spanish war veterans from over the entire state.

Plain Facts On Proposed Factory For Consideration

Something over $30,000 of the $50,000 necessary has been subscribed to the machine tool factory proposition which has been offered to Janesville people and the committee at work feel confident that the balance necessary to bring the plant to this city can be raised.

"Time in which to complete the subscription is short and the question of holding the tentative option on the institution some weeks ago becomes a matter of considerable moment. This plant will employ some thirty skilled mechanics at the start, and will produce a machine tool of improved sort, which has but little competition. It will be marketed and supervised by one of the best known special tool men in the United States, a man who has made a wonderful business success of his own institution and who in all probability will, within a year and a half, bring his own factory to this city, employing some 80 skilled mechanics, one hundred more families for Janesville."

Within a short time, a most conservative estimate of the net profit of the factory is 15% to 20%. One man, an outsider, has so much faith in the deal that he has put his name down for $20,000 worth of stock. This man's father subscribed for $2,000 of the people and locations for certain reasons cannot be printed as yet, but the committee has the full and complete data to give you. As an investment the proposition is not one penny will be paid without sufficient safeguard to make positive security. Will you do your share?

WILSON SIGNS CANAL TOLLS REPEAL BILL

MEASURE AS AMENDED BY SEN-ATE AND PASSED BY HOUSE
NOW BECOMES LAW.

TRUST PROGRAM NEXT

Anti-Trust Legislation Will Be Pushed
Without Delay in Order to Prevent Business Uncertainty.

Washington, June 15.—President Wilson today signed the Panama toll exemption repeal bill as amended in the senate and agreed to by the house. There was no ceremony at the signing, as the president's signature was the only person with the president. Mr. Wilson signed the bill with a quill pen used by President Harrison in signing the international copyright bill in 1891, and President Taft in signing the Pan American union bill in 1903.

President Wilson made the direct charge that sentiment in favor of postponement of the administrative trust legislative program was the result of a campaign by certain interests and intimates that it was the repression of which he had spoken. Anti-trust legislation will be pushed through the senate during the present session of congress by every means at the president's command.

He had no intention of abandoning his original program and that he did not believe congress would adjourn before the trust bills were enacted. The president believes business is as good and in some respects better now than it was some time ago, and that it would be much worse for business if the trust legislation is not to be than to have it passed.

Copies of letters and telegrams circulated among business men, calling for an adjournment of congress without completing the trust bills, praying for the freight rate increase asked by the railroads of the interstate commerce commission, and calling for a halt of the "attacks on business."

President Wilson made it clear that the campaign would have no effect upon him and that it was his plan to push the trust program through the congress with the aid of all the means at his command.

ALLEGED ABDUCTOR LEAPS FROM TRAIN

Man Charged With Kidnapping Knapp
Girl Makes Daring Escape But Is Recaptured.

Chicago, June 15.—After a daring attempt to escape by leaping from the window of a moving train, and after a five mile chase by bloodhounds, Edward Hastings, twenty-eight years of age of Watervliet, New York, charged with abducting Hazel Belle Knapp, aged eighteen, was brought to Chicago today by Detective J. L. Kinder.

The prisoner escaped from the train near Northblatt, Nebraska, and was chased to a farm house by the aid of bloodhounds, and rearrested. "Hastings complained of feeling ill, and I left him to get a glass of water," said Detective Kinder. "While he was away he leaped out of the window. The train was running forty miles an hour, and it is a mystery to me how he escaped injury."

DISSOLVES UPPER HOUSE OF DANISH PARLIAMENT

Copenhagen, Denmark, June 15.—The upper house of the Danish parliament was dissolved today by order of King Christian. The twelve members appointed by the King were not included in a general election, which took only the fifty-four elected members.

The lower house was prorogued until after the election for the upper house. The dissolution of the upper house is an outcome of the deadlock over the constitutional amendment bill which abolishes all property qualifications for election of members of that body, and takes away from the crown the right to nominate twelve members of that chamber.

ILLINOIS SUFFRAGE LAW IS HELD LEGAL

Supreme Court Declares Amendment
Giving Ballot to Women Is Constitutional.

Springfield, Ill., June 15.—The Illinois woman's suffrage act was declared constitutional by the state supreme court in deciding the Scown suit.

The woman's suffrage act granted limited suffrage to all women citizens of Illinois, permitting them to vote for statutory officers and on propositions presented to the Illinois electorate.

Under the act 133,000 women in every part of the state participated in the spring elections and were instrumental in voting out approximately 1,000 saloons. Women for the first time were elected to office places.

The decision was hailed with rejoicing at the equal suffrage headquarters. It is now the plan of the suffragists to work for a constitutional amendment which will permit passage of a law granting women the right to vote for every elective office in the state.

Bill First Dismissed.
The Scaled in the superior court in Chicago by W. J. Scown, as a taxpayer, demanded that the election commissioners of that city be forbidden to incur expense in providing facilities for women voting at the polls on the ground that the woman suffrage act passed by the last legislature was unconstitutional and void.

The bill was dismissed for want of equity, and an appeal was promptly prayed in the supreme court. During pendency of the appeal the spring elections were held. Counsel for Scown contended that the act in effect was an amendment to the constitution, which could not be accomplished by a statute.

"Turn Clock Back."
The point was also raised that the suffrage act in reality amended the general election laws.

Counsel for the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association joined with counsel for the Chicago election commissioners in opposing the law. The general argument against the constitutionality of the act, the defenders of the measure replied that Scown's attorney sought to reopen the entire question of women voting and turn the clock back twenty-two years.

RIVAL FORCES WAGE FIGHT AT MEETING

Fraternal Insurance Hangs in Balance
Of Outcome of Convention of Modern Woodmen at Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, June 15.—Fraternal history was in the making and the future of fraternal insurance in the United States hung in the balance here today when the Head Camp of Modern Woodmen of America met in triennial convention.

Not only the million odd "neighbors" of the society watched with keenest interest the fight that was sure to come over the question of raising the rates of insurance, but persons holding membership and policies with other fraternal insurance societies realized that the outcome of the contest would determine whether they too were eventually to break away from the old low rate plans and join in the movement toward the insurance schemes figured out by insurance actuaries.

In the fight today the Head Camp officers stood arrayed against a faction of the delegates coming chiefly from the Mississippi Valley, headed by E. S. Smith of Springfield, Mo. Smith will be the "insurgent" candidate for Head Consul, the chief of the Head Camp, opposing A. R. Talbot of Rock Island, Ill., where the Head Camp is headquartered.

Justice Hughes, in the majority opinion, said that Thaw's extradition proceedings, the Supreme court will next pass upon that.

NATIONAL GUARD OFFICERS START FOR CAMP DOUGLAS FOR A WEEK'S DRILLING

Madison, Wis., June 15.—Officers and non-coms of the Wisconsin National Guard were enroute today for Camp Douglas where they were already there setting down for a week of drill under army officers. For the first time the officers' school is to be attended by non-coms and with most of the states troops represented the camp promised to be a large one. None of them doubt that it will be a busy one.

It was planned today to form the officers into four companies comprising a provisional battalion. In this formation they will be drilled to regular army officers. It was said that the men who wear chevrons and shoulder bars will be put through the course they themselves have handed out to the draftees. The purpose is to make them more proficient in the handling of men under them.

The quartermaster sergeants will be instructed in the proper methods of loading a wagon.

BAD FAITH IS DENIED

Mexican Delegation Has Made No
Charges and Does Not Contemplating Withdrawing from Niagara Conference.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 15.—The American delegates, mediators and Mexican delegates resumed their informal conference today on the performance of the new provisional government of Mexico. More names were discussed, but the American delegates have not yet obtained from the constitutionalists a complete list of persons who would be acceptable to them.

In the absence of such information the discussion was devoted to the phrasing of the second plank of the American government. It is most likely that a provisional president and four cabinet officers will be provided for instead of a commission or council, as the latter is not in conformity with the Mexican constitution.

Charges Unfounded.
The publications in some newspapers of charges of bad faith against the American government for its refusal at this juncture of a constitutional list for provisional president, brought no formal comment on the American delegates. It is now, however, that the Americans informed the mediators in the very first conference several weeks ago of their intention to favor a constitutionalist, in order to nullify the big revolution army which would cease fighting on such a condition.

Whether the mediators informed the Mexican delegates of the attitude of the American government in the conference, is not known. The American delegates are surprised at the published report of bad faith, and they declare their position has been before the mediators for several weeks.

DENY BREAK IS NEAR

Emil Bahr, head of the Mexican delegation, authorized the statement that the Mexican government had the United States had been made by the Mexican delegates at any time.

He insisted that the Mexican delegates had not wired for permission to withdraw. He added that the American plan was submitted in writing last week the Mexican delegates had no information of the desire of the United States that a constitutional list be chosen.

All sides agree that upon the selection of a provisional president, the success or failure of mediation depends. The Huerta delegates have suggested five names. The Americans have informally mentioned several, but are waiting for a complete list from the constitutionalists. Some of the Mexican delegates are hopeful that in the end an individual may be found, who though a constitutionalist in sympathy, may not be an unalterable partisan.

DR. DALAND GIVES HIS ANNUAL SERMON

DELIVERS BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS TO MILTON GRADUATING CLASS SUNDAY.

EMPHASIS ON SPIRIT

Culture of Spiritual Side of Human Nature Required for a Well Rounded Life, He Says. (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milton, June 15.—On Sunday evening a large and attentive audience was gathered on the occasion of the delivery of the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of Milton College. In this service the president, the Rev. W. C. Daland, was assisted by the pastors of the local churches and the choir of the church. The Rev. Daland spoke the invocation, the scripture lesson was read by Pastor Wilson, prayer was offered by Pastor Randolph, and the Rev. Zimmerman pronounced the benediction.

President Daland's sermon was an earnest appeal in behalf of the "Culture of the Spirit." His text was I Thess. 5:23, "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." His appeal was for a blending of the culture of the body, mind and heart, with spiritual culture dominant. He addressed his remarks chiefly to the graduating class, the largest number of whom are to enter upon the teaching profession. He appealed to them to realize in themselves the ideals they should seek to impress upon their pupils. Some sentences from his sermon are here given:

"The problem of education is the problem of life. We shall never know how or what to teach our children until we first have settled the question of their life itself, what it is to be. Our theory of life lies at the basis of our theory of education. The primary problem is how to live at all, how to make a living, but this is not the main problem. It does not matter seriously whether or not we live. But, it does matter, it does matter very seriously, whether we live whether well or ill. Not a long life, but a blamless one should be our ideal.

"St. Paul's ideal of life includes that of the body, soul and spirit. Whatever view we take of the nature of man, the spirit is most certainly that part of our nature which makes us different from the lower animals. Animals have, to a certain extent, reason, feelings, and purposive actions, but their life is only in the present. It is not reflective. It is thus in the higher and intellectual and esthetic realms, and most chiefly in the moral and religious spheres that our life is superior to that of the lower animals. Man alone can gain the culture of the spirit. In him this culture, or the lack of it, is always dominant. It is our glory as men and women that by the power of our spirits we can look over our lives, reviewing all the past, judging of the present, and looking forward to the future. Man alone can improve his own nature. It is this spiritual power that we should cultivate. Reach out ideal that grows more lofty as you approach it. That ideal is God. Plato's ideal of life is 'likeness to God as far as it is possible to man.' St. Matthew's is expressed in the words of Christ, 'Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect.'

BULLHEADS ESCAPE PLANTING IN RIVER

Residents Near Spaulding's Pond Make Objections to Seining for Bullheads.

The attempt of the members of the Rod and Gun club to seine Spaulding's pond for bullheads, planted in Rock river Sunday, turned out to be a dismal failure. The sixty foot minnow net used proved too small for the seining and the netters had such poor luck that they allowed what bullheads they caught to rest in peace in the pond and not make them search new and better feeding grounds in Rock river.

As was expected, nearly a hundred residents near the pond were on hand to prevent any attempt to spoil their fishing ground. Game Warden William Anderson, E. F. Green, William Taylor and Albert Anderson held a conference of war with the men and after considerable mediation the parties came to an agreement. The Janesville men agreed that their intention was good the objectors turned and lent aid to the seiners. At the end of the pond the net was drawn and it was evident that the bullheads had vacated this spot for deeper and safer waters. After three or four attempts the effort was given up, until a larger and better seine could be obtained.

Miss Frances Hill, Oberlin College, who resigned early this spring as physical training instructor, was a favorite among the students. Miss Alice Abel was secured to fill the vacancy left by her. RAIN PREVENTS GAME BETWEEN NINES SUNDAY

Flooded diamonds prevented the Janesville Cardinals from meeting the All Star aggregation from the Walworth County League at the opening of Yost's Park Sunday afternoon. Early in the morning the base lines resembled a raceway and the pitcher's mound would have been a nice swimming place if the river was not so near by.

The meeting between the Janesville White Sox and the Beloit Athletics at the Driving Park, was also called off, because of the leaky skies Saturday night.

Sport Snap Shots

Something new in the way of a ball game was had in Portland, Ore., not so very long ago. Two men's clubs from churches got together for the contest and it was played in an unusual manner. Each player was required to hold an egg in one hand and play ball with the other. The hits, runs and so on were scored as usual except that when a player's egg was broken one run was scored for the other side. The score at the end of the game—counting broken eggs—was 15 to 11, although the actual score was 4 to 2. Only five innings were played, which was quite enough. Each first baseman broke three eggs, one of the catchers broke three eggs, the other catcher one, and both pitchers broke a couple. The climax came at the end of the game, when the shortstop in the ex-

PRACTICALLY NEW TEAM IS BEING MOULDED INTO SHAPE FOR THE NEXT OLYMPICS; NEW STARS ARE MOSTLY COLLEGE MEN

Practically an entirely new Olympic team is being moulded into shape for the games which will be held in the Berlin stadium in 1916. As a result of recent collegiate meets experts are predicting that three-fourths of the next American Olympic team will be composed of college athletes. Among these will likely be Meredith of Pennsylvania and Haff of Michigan. A few veterans among the non-collegians, such as Abel Kiviat, Pat McDonald and Matt McGrath, are likely to retain their form; while doubtless new men in the clubs good enough to represent Uncle Sam will spring up between now and the time of selecting the team.

The Beloit Collie Hill nine defeated the Black Hawk nine of Janesville, at Beloit, Sunday, three to one, after a nip and tuck exhibition of the national pastime. Star pitching featured the game, Flemming striking out nine and allowing three hits, while Hanson, the Line City artist, whiffed fifteen. Errors lost the contest for the Janesville nine. Summary:

THE APOLLO.
"Evangeline," that beautiful story, as told in Longfellow's immortal poem, will be presented at the Apollo tonight and Tuesday. So many are familiar with the story that seeing it dramatized will be like gazing on places one knows. The scenes are taken and staged in the real land of Evangeline.

Longfellow began the poem of Evangeline in 1845. The story of its inception is as follows: A friend of Longfellow and Hawthorne heard from a French Canadian the story of a young couple in Acadia. They were separated at the time of the expulsion of the Acadians about 1755 and the bride wandered about New England all her life searching for her husband. At last when both were old she found him on his death bed. Longfellow, impressed by the tale, said to Hawthorne, "Will you write a poem?" Hawthorne promised and "Evangeline" was the result.

When wondering what you'll buy, either for the bride or yourself, our China and Glassware Department is bound to be of help in settling such questions; the prices are very reasonable. Come and see.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

Today marked the hundred and thirty-seventh anniversary of the adoption of the stars and stripes, the flag of our country. It was conceived in perilous times for our little nation of thirteen states that was struggling with its tiny might against England for independence, and while a typical American production, strange to say its history can be traced back to the twelfth century, or nearly six hundred years prior to the first flag day, June 14th, 1777.

During the first crusade in 1095, Pope Urban II assigned to all of the Christian nations as standards crosses varying in color and design, emblematic of the warfare in which they were engaged. To the Scotch troops was assigned the white saltire, known as the white cross of St. Andrew, on a blue field. The British used a yellow cross, but a century and a quarter later they adopted a red cross on a white field, known as the red cross of St. George.

When James VI of Scotland ascended the throne of England as James I, he combined the two flags, and issued a proclamation requiring all ships to carry the new flag at their main masts. At the same time the vessels of South Britain were to carry at their foremasts the red cross of St. George and the ships of North Britain to carry the white cross of St. Andrew.

The new flag was known as "Kings Colors," the "Union Colors," or the "Great Union," and later as the "Union Jack," and was the one under which the British made all their permanent settlements in America. It was the flag of Great Britain only by proclamation, however; not until 1707 did parliament pass an act definitely uniting the two countries and their flags. In the same year the government issued regulations requiring the navy to use what was known as the white ensign; the naval reserve, the blue ensign; and the merchant marine, the red ensign. Owing to the fact that the British merchant vessels were everywhere, the colonists in America came to look upon this red ensign as the flag of Great Britain.

The people in the New England colonies were bitterly opposed to the cross in the flag. In 1625 some of the troops in Massachusetts declined to march under this flag and the military commissioners were forced to design other flags for their troops with the cross left out. The design they adopted has not been preserved. In 1652 a mint was established in Boston. Money coined in this mint had the pine tree stamped on one side of it. The pine tree design was also used on New England flags, certainly by 1704 and possibly as early as 1625.

At the outbreak of the revolution the American colonies had no flag common to all of them. In many cases the merchant marine flag of England was used with the pine tree substituted for the Union Jack. Massachusetts adopted the green pine tree on a white field with the motto: "An Appeal to Heaven." Some of the southern states had the rattlesnake flag with the motto "Don't Tread on Me" on a white or yellow field. This flag had been used by South Carolina as early as 1744. Benjamin Franklin defended the rattlesnake device on the ground that the rattlesnake is found only in America and that serpent emblems were considered by ancients to be symbols of wisdom.

In September, 1777, there was displayed in the South what is by many believed to be the first distinctly American flag. It was blue with a white crescent, and matched the dress of the troops, who wore caps inscribed "Liberty or death."

The colonists desired to adopt a common flag; but they had not yet declared independence and were not at first seeking independence. They took the British flag as they knew it, and made a new colonial flag by dividing the red field with white stripes into thirteen alternate red and white stripes. This is known as the Cambridge flag, because it was first unfurled over Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Mass., on January 1, 1778. It complied with the law of 1797 by having the Union Jack on it; it also represented the thirteen colonies by the thirteen stripes.

As the colonists gradually became converted to the idea that independence from the mother country was necessary, they began to notify the flag, first by leaving off the Union Jack and using only the thirteen horizontal stripes. The modified flags were not always red and white, but regularly consisted of combinations of two colors selected from red, white, blue, and yellow. The final modification was the replacement of the Union Jack by the white stars on a blue field.

The stars are the only distinctive feature of the American flag. The charming story which credits Betsy Ross with making the first flag of stars and stripes is still accepted by historians. When Washington suggested the six-pointed star, she demonstrated the ease with which a five-pointed star could be made by folding a piece of paper and producing one with a single clip of the scissors. Some writers are of the opinion that both stars and stripes in the flag were derived from the coat of arms of the Washington family, but this theory is not generally held.

The official adoption of our first flag was in 1777. On June 14 of that year the Continental Congress passed an act providing that "the flag of the thirteen United States colonies be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation." The thirteen stars were arranged in a circle to symbolize the perpetuity of the union of the states.

Vermont was admitted to the union in 1791 and Kentucky in 1792. It was felt that these two new states ought to be recognized on the flag, so in 1794 congress passed an act making the flag fifteen stars and fifteen stripes.

This remained the flag of the United States throughout the war of 1812, until there were twenty states in the union. In 1816 an effort was again made to modify the flag so that all the new states would be represented on it. To be continually adding stripes would make the flag very awkward in shape and appearance, so after arguing the matter for two years, congress decided to return to the original thirteen stripes and one star for each state. Congress has never determined the arrangement of the stars nor the shape and proportions of the flag, and there has been great variation, especially in the grouping of the stars. There are still many who believe that the symbolic circular grouping of stars should be restored.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

The latest move in the Mexican situation looks very much as though President Wilson's policy of "peace at any cost" may result in his humiliation. He has stubbornly refused to recognize Huerta, but is finally compelled to do so through demands of the mediators, who, by the way, are diplomats, to say the least.

Whatever may be said of Mexico, the fact has long been recognized, that whatever the country possesses in the way of even a semblance of government is centered at Mexico City, and however much of fraud and intrigue may have been employed, Huerta is the only man claiming any authority to the title of president. This authority has been used in dealing with other nations, and the mediators could not do less than to recognize the office which he represents, as they have done. The welfare of the nation is of more vital importance than any man connected with it, and in retiring from the field and naming his successor, Huerta is doing the only thing left for him to do.

Many people, both at home and abroad, who saw the logical outcome, advised Mr. Wilson to deal with Huerta directly, months ago, but to no purpose, and he is now reaping the rewards of a visionary humanitarianism.

As a final result America may be obliged to assume a protectorate in Mexico, which is a different and more difficult proposition than confronted us after the trouble in Cuba.

Carranza and the rebel forces are not likely to submit quietly to this sort of intervention, and authority to act may demand the support of the American army.

If the plans of the mediators carry, it remains to be seen whether universal peace will result, and it is safe to assume that time and intelligent action will be demanded to secure it.

The fact is generally admitted that President Wilson is a good man, but he has yet to demonstrate that he is a great statesman. The Mexican situation demands statesmanship.

The Chicago Herald makes its bow to the public—a combination of the old Herald, the Times, the Inter Ocean and the Record four papers that have made history in the Illinois metropolis in past decades. Now that the school days are over for the year the next event is the opening of the playgrounds for the summer months. Too much attention can not be given to this feature of the vacation life of the younger generation, that of teaching the youngsters, boys and girls, how to play and get the most good out of their exercise.

Why is it?

Sometimes it seems as if every person who is lacking in initiative, special ability or industry desires to be either a writer, an actor or an artist. The most agreeable way for a lazy person to make a living is to express his own opinions, emotions and impressions.—Norman Hapgood, in Harper's Weekly.

Historic Bearded. The longest beard recorded in history was that of John Mayo, painter to the Emperor Charles V. Though he was a tall man it is said that his beard was of such a length that he could tread upon it. He was very vain of it and usually fastened it with a ribbon to his buttonhole, and sometimes he would untie it by command of the emperor, who took great delight in seeing the wind blow it in the faces of his courtiers.

INVESTIGATE FIRE CONDITIONS HERE

Assistant To State Fire Marshal Spends Day in Janesville—Many Fire Menaces Here.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHAT MY LETTER FRIENDS SAY.

I WISH I had space enough to publish all the interesting letters my reader friends write me. But even if that is out of the question, I'm going to give you extracts from two or three of them today.

In answer to my article on "Profanity" a letter friend writes me a beautiful letter, saying that he has made up his mind to break himself of the habit. He adds something about habits which is decidedly worth are. "We make our habits through thoughts, and our habits make us what we are. I got the habit of swearing at a young age by not realizing the degradation of it. The whipping was the only thing I considered was in the way of my swearing with the other boys. I found I could swear anywhere but in the presence of my parents and not get whipped. So I became a professional swearer and my parents never knew it until I was a full grown young man."

"I found that my teaching was wrong, so I took a different course with my children. I never told them they mustn't do anything because I would whip them, but because it was wrong in itself, and they haven't got one bad habit that I know of."

The best part of this letter is that it is apparently from a man of no great education (I have corrected the orthography and spelling). And yet in spite of lack of education, he is evidently a deep thinker. Three cheers and a hurrah for him, I say. He is the kind of man America needs.

Some time ago I wrote about the strange way in which thoughts of distant friends often slip into our minds without any apparent cause. Apropos of this talk, a letter friend sends in the following comment:

"Some months ago I chanced to read one of your 'Chats' which rather impressed me, as it touched on a subject I have often sought to have explained, but without success. If I recall correctly, you dwelt on the inability to account for alien thoughts, or memory pictures flashing through our brain. Thinking that it may interest you, I am sending you a copy of a little poem taken from an issue of the Messenger of Peace, which struck me as a new way to deal with these 'thought waves'."

The poem reads:

"Pray One for Another.
(James, 5:16.)

"I cannot tell why there should come to me
A thought of some one far and miles away,
In swift insistence on the memory
Unless a need there be that I should pray.

"Too hurried oft are we to spare the thought,
For days together of some friends away;
Perhaps God does it for us, and we ought
To read his signal as a call to pray.

"Perhaps, just then, my friend has fiercer fight
And more appalling weakness, and decay
Of course, and darkness, some lost sense of right;
And so in case he needs my prayer, I pray.

"Friend, do the same for me. If I intrude
Unasked upon you, on some crowded day,
Give me a moment's prayer as interlude;
Be very sure I need it, therefore pray."

"Marianne Warrington."

When we consider that a reverent look heavenward, a thought—God bless my friend—constitute a prayer, does it not seem a little thing to ask that we pray when called and without any apparent reason some far distant friend or enemy perhaps intrudes on us in thought?

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. Whitewash That Will Not Rub Off—Dissolve glue in hot water and add in the proportion of a pint of this water to four gallons of whitewash.

For Mangle on Cats—Mix vaseline with a drop or two of diluted carbol acid, as put in the drug stores as an antiseptic and healing solve. A very little placed on the affected part and a clean linen rag tied around it will heal the skin and cause a new growth of fur.

THE TABLE. Buttermilk Strawberry Shortcake—Measure one pint of short buttermilk and add to it one even teaspoonful of soda and beat well; stir in half a teaspoonful of salt and enough Graham flour to make a batter rather stiffer than cake batter; pat into thin cakes and bake in a brisk oven. If you do not like so much crust, lay one cake on top of the other to bake with bits of butter between. Sweeten and mash a quart of strawberries, pull the cakes apart, butter them and spread the fruit between and on top. Serve with cream.

Strawberry Sponge—One and a half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin, one-third of a cup of cold water, three-fourths of a cup of sugar, one-third of a cup of boiling water, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one and a half cups of mashed and scalded strawberries, two cups of heavy cream, whipped. Soak the gelatin in the cold water. Add boiling water and stir until the gelatin is dissolved, add sugar, lemon juice and strawberries. Let cool. When slightly thickened fold in the whipped cream. Turn mixture into a mould and chill until firm.

Baked Rice Pudding—One-half cup of rice, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one quart of skimmed milk, or one pint of full milk, and one pint of water. Pick over and wash the rice. Stir it into the milk with the sugar and salt. Butter a pudding dish, pour in the milk and rice; bake slowly for two hours covered, then uncover and brown. Scald raisins and use. Bread Pudding—One pint of milk, one cup of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of butter, one lemon, one-half cup of sugar, two eggs. Add the sugar and the crumbs to the scalded milk, add the butter and

ECONOMICAL MEAT DISHES.

For roast pork with cowpeas, a leg of young pork should be selected. With a sharp knife make a deep cut in the tawckle and fill the opening with sage, pepper, salt, and chopped onion. When the roast is half done, score the skin but do not cut deeper than the outer rind. When the meat is nearly cooked pour off the excess of fat and add a quart of white cowpeas which have been previously parboiled or "hulled" and cook slowly until quite done and the meat is brown. Apple sauce may be served with this dish.

Inexpensive meat salads may be concocted by the accomplished cook, although in such cases as chicken salad made from white meat alone, these salads are not economical. Occasionally eggs are combined with meat, making very nutritious dishes.

Whether this is an economy or not, of course, depends on the comparative cost of eggs and meat.

To make ham and poached eggs with cream sauce, place a piece of thinly sliced ham on a round of buttered toast, a poached egg on the ham, and cover with a highly seasoned cream or Hollandaise sauce. A slice of tongue may be used instead of the ham. If preferred, a well-seasoned and rather thick tomato sauce or curry sauce may be used.

Another popular way to extend the flavor of meat over a large amount of food is by the use of stuffing or forcemeat. As it is impossible to introduce much stuffing into some pieces of meat, even if the meat is cut to make a pocket for it, it is often well to prepare more than can be put into the meat, and to cook the remainder in the pan beside the meat. Some cooks cover the extra stuffing with buttered paper while it is cooking and baste it at intervals.

Mock duck is made by placing on a round steak a stuffing of bread crumbs well seasoned with chopped onions, butter, chopped suet or dripping, salt, pepper, and a little sage, if the flavor is relished. The steak is then rolled around the stuffing and tied with a string in several places. If the steak seems tough, the roll is steamed or stewed until tender before roasting in the oven until brown. Or it may be cooked in a casserole or other covered dish, in which case a cupful or more of water or soup-stock should be poured around the meat. Mock duck is excellent served with currant or other acid jelly.

A popular dish known as veal or beef birds or by a variety of special names is made by taking small pieces of meat, each just large enough for an individual serving, and preparing them in the same way as the mock duck is prepared.

Sometimes variety is introduced by seasoning the stuffing with chopped olives or tomato. Many cooks prepare their "birds" by browning in a little fat, then adding a little water, covering closely and simmering until tender.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a cream whipcord dress. I took the hem off to see how long it is. Now there is a mark all around the bottom. I washed it in gasoline. When it was dry I rubbed it once more with gasoline, but still it shows.

(1) Get a little oxalic acid at the drug store. Dilute it half with water, then take a soft hand brush and scrub the hat well with the brush. Clean the set, then rub it with dust as possible. Clean the spine of the hat each time, then rinse with a clean cloth and clear cold water. When the hat has all been cleaned, white cloth, then stuff it with paper to keep its surface, and lay it in a shady place to dry.

(2) That depends upon a good many things. If you love each other, if you can make him a good wife, and if he can support you comfortably, it would seem a good idea to accept him.

Women Worth While.

MRS. JAMES S. DAVENPORT.

(By Solene Armstrong Harmon.) Of the wife of Representative James S. Davenport, of Vinita, Oklahoma, an amusing story is told, to the truth of which Mrs. Davenport has cheerfully acknowledged. At a certain hotel in the west one day a party of eastern tourists occupied a table next to the one at which sat Mrs. Davenport and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, wife of Senator Gore. The possible dangers of travel in the west was the topic of conversation among the easterners, one of whom began to expatiate upon the Indians. As the tourist talked his imagination led him to paint the Indian in blacker and blacker colors. Just as he was putting the finishing descriptive touches on the villain of his chivalry, and cruelly which his fancy had created, Mrs. Davenport, unable to restrain herself longer, leaped to her feet.

"For the love of heaven," she cried to Mrs. Gore, "why don't you tell them that I am an Indian?"

Mrs. Davenport is not ashamed of this story. Why should she be, with the blood of that intrepid old chief, Tecumseh, flowing in her veins?

"My great-grandmother," she says, "was the daughter of Tecumseh, the great and picturesque old chief of the Shawnee tribe. My father has often told me how as a little boy he has listened to thrilling tales of Tecumseh and his warriors by aged men and women of the tribe who had lived through the terrors and dangers of the conquest of that land by the white man. His own grandmother often recounted to him how old Tecumseh, filled one day with an intuitive sense of danger, rushed her and her young husband into their canoe and bade them seek safety miles down the river. He refused to listen to their pleas that he take thought for his own safety, and they never saw him again after that day."

"I believe any one who has even a fragmentary acquaintance with the history of the American Indian must realize that we receive from him a valuable heritage. His intrepid courage, his stoicism in time of suffering, his pride of race, are characteristics which the proudest nations of the earth may well emulate."

Mrs. Davenport, herself is one-eighth Indian. She is a member of the Shawnee tribe by birth, but is a Cherokee by adoption, the Shawnees having sold their lands in Kansas, and purchased tribal rights in the Cherokee tribe. Her father, Robert Ironside, has often been sent to Washington to treat with the United States government in behalf of the interests of certain tribes.

The Davenports have an interesting home in Vinita, Oklahoma. This town by the way, was named for a Washington woman, Mrs. Vinnie Ream. It was when Mrs. Ream, then Vinnie Ream, a young and beautiful girl, was in Indian Territory that the Indian chief, Bon-dinot, became her devoted admirer and named a town for her.

Mrs. Davenport spends several months of each year in Vinita. In Washington she has a wide circle of friends, and is considered one of the cleverest and wisest women in the congressional set. She is interested heart and soul in her husband's work, knows his district about as thoroughly as does he, and, in case of his secretary's absence, can take charge of his correspondence and other work with perfect efficiency.

Send for The Cook's Book By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill It's FREE

Our instructions to the famous editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine were: "Get up a book of recipes of the things people like best. Find the best way to make and bake each one. Then write it out so plainly that even an inexperienced housewife can't have a failure."

"The Cook's Book" was the result. Some of the 90 recipes were originated, many of them were improved upon, and all were personally tested by this best known authority on cooking in America, and she tells so clearly how she made everything that one cannot go astray.

While some of the cakes and pastry are elaborate enough for any occasion, the recipes are all thoroughly practical and call for no expensive and unusual ingredients. In addition to telling how to make them, the book is beautifully illustrated in colors showing how to arrange and serve the dishes appetizingly.

More than half a million of "The Cook's Book" are now in use in American households. Yet the demand is constantly increasing. Many send for two or three at a time to give to friends or young housekeepers. Don't depend on borrowing one from a neighbor—have one of your own.

How to Get "The Cook's Book"

In every 25c. can of K.C. Baking Powder is packed a colored certificate. Send us one of these certificates (paste it on a postal card if you like) with your name and address plainly written, and "The Cook's Book" will be mailed free of charge. Only one book for each certificate.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

The old feather bed as a bed is a good windy day is best. thing that has lain long in Time's discard. It may however renew its sleep in your guest room. "This is youth in the form of pillows, and very often its second life is better than the first, as feathers are so expensive, the defects as well as the merits of our own homes."

If you are fortunate enough to have had a feather bed left you by a dear little grandmother, or grandaunt, and be glad. Decide on a set of pillows. Do not make the mistake in filling that is so often made—that of ripping the tick, running one's hand in for the feathers and—whiff! Your feathers are all over the room—every place but in a new pillow case where you intended them to go.

In filling your pillows shake the feathers away from one corner of the bed as entirely as possible; then rip your tick and insert your pillow case and sew your tick to the edge of the bed and the end of the pillow. When the desired fullness, which should not be too full, as they will be hard and refuse to fluff, shake your feathers again away from the corner of the bed and the end of the pillow. Make your pillow a little too scant, instead of generously full—they will insure better rest, and will not be inelastic. Pillows made in this manner could not sew up the open end, lay on a table and proceed to fill much as one ties a quilt. An upholstery needle is a necessity here and can be purchased from any furniture dealer. Sew up the open end, lay on a table and proceed to fill much as one ties a quilt. Another good use for a feather bed is to have it made into a mattress. If it be a large tick you can get two mattresses from the amount of feathers. The task is at best a very inconvenient one and it can be done by the men who make a business of renovating feather pillows and mattresses very easily. However, if you wish the work to be "home grown," here is a good way of doing it. Measure your new ticking in a strip about five inches in width between the top and bottom. Leave one end open about half way. Stitch this opening to the tick as in filling pillows and shake the feathers from the old tick into the new. Use plenty of feathers for the mattress can stand it where the pillows could not. Sew up the open end, lay on a table and proceed to fill much as one ties a quilt. A good practice of the olden times was to rub beeswax over the under side of the tick so as to prevent the feathers from sticking through. Pillows or feather beds should never be aired in the strong sun, as the heat brings out the oil in the feathers. A

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

By
ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolverton"

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright, 1914, by F. G. Brown & Co.
"That funeral's over," he said abruptly. "Now I'm in a mood for business." He turned to his desk. Merry's eyes followed him. They were dim with unspoken sympathy, but he knew the man well enough not to put it into words.

Wentworth pulled out his key-ring, opened a drawer, and took the slip of paper from the yellow envelope. He stood staring at it for a moment. A wave of crimson swept across his face, then his mouth straightened into a cruel, inexorable line. Merry's eyes were still fixed on him. Enoch did not speak, but crossed the room with the paper in his hand and laid it on the table beside Merry. Andrew's eyes took it in with one sweeping glance; it was the bond he had signed when they played that last hand of poker.

"Do you remember this?" asked Wentworth abruptly.

"Of course. Say, old chap, what has that to do with our business? Oh, I know." He lifted his eyes with a relieved glance. "Of course it's an understood thing you're to run things, and as for money, Lord, I don't care for money. Take all you want of it. It's fame my heart's set on; I've a grand ambition and a thirst for greatness—as I told you—but it runs in only one direction; to win a name as a dramatist, a name that will live when my capering days are over. I want a halo; not such an aureole as Shakespeare's," his eyes sparkled and a smile lighted his face, "but a halo—I demand a halo. I'll be satisfied with nothing smaller than a cartwheel."

He rose and went prancing buoyantly about the room on his toe tips, humming a fantastic waltz from "The King at Large." Wentworth sat with a grim, brooding look in his eyes. Andrew stopped to stare at him.

"Why so mum, sweet Sirrah?" he asked blithely.

"Merry," Wentworth spoke in an expressionless voice, "read that bond through—carefully. Read it aloud."

The actor picked up the sheet of paper and read it with dramatic gestures, being almost prostrate at each pause.

To Enoch Wentworth.
I hereby pledge myself to you until death—to do your every bidding—to obey your every demand—to the extent of my physical and mental ability—to you to furnish me with support.

ANDREW MERRY.
He dropped lightly upon his knees in front of Wentworth when he finished. "I await thine orders, most grave and reverend seigneur." Then he laid his fingers upon Wentworth's arm and looked up with an expectant smile.

Enoch wrenched his arm free and rose awkwardly to his feet. The comedian drew back with a startled expression, as if fear struggled with bewilderment.

"You see," Enoch's lips were perfectly colorless, "your mental ability is pledged to me."

Merry stared at him, curious and perplexed.

"It is your mental ability which I claim now," Enoch said deliberately.

Andrew spoke in a coarse whisper. "I don't understand."

"I demand your play!"

"You demand my play? To sell?"

"No; of course not," Wentworth jerked out the words abruptly. "Why should I want to sell? I want to produce it—as mine, as one—I have written."

Merry moved toward him with an agony of terror in his eyes. "You want to take from me my one complete effort, my one ambition, my everything—the work which is making a man of me, on which I have toiled steadily for weeks? You would do that! Do you understand—while I wrote I scarcely stopped to eat or sleep? When I did sleep I dreamed of it and—"

He stopped, too much affected to trust his voice. He laid one hand over the other as if to still himself, for he was trembling.

Wentworth stood looking at the younger man. Something cold and relentless crept into his eyes. He laid his hand on Merry's arm.

"Let me talk to you, Andrew." "Talk! Talk! You damned thief!" He pushed Enoch aside with quick repulsion. His face was blazing with wrath. He went tramping about the room in a vague, headless, half-blinded fashion. A thought seemed to strike him abruptly. He wheeled around suddenly and faced the man beside him.

"Why in the devil's name, Enoch, should you do this? Have I ever done you one cruel, disloyal act in all my life?"

Wentworth did not answer. He returned the terror in Merry's eyes with a cool, stubborn glance.

"Did you have this hellish plunder scheme in mind when you drew up that bond?" he asked unsteadily. "What did you have in mind when you made me your slave?"

"I don't know—exactly," Wentworth turned such a straightforward gaze upon Merry that he realized the man was speaking the truth. "As I told you that night, and I am telling the truth, it was nothing but a fancy of mine. When you came to me with this," Enoch's hand dropped on the manuscript which lay upon the table, "you came with a great temptation; it was too much for me."

"Evidently," cried Merry. His tone was withering in its scorn. He seated himself and his eyes turned fiercely upon Wentworth. The muscles of his cheek twitched as regularly as a pulse.

"The play is mine," Enoch seemed to have grown strangely cool and impervious to contempt or anger. "The play is mine," he repeated; "it is the due and forfeit of my bond."

The eyes of the actor narrowed and he laughed savagely.

"Take your pound of flesh," he cried. "What will you do with it?"

"Everything we had planned."

Enoch's voice was calm. "Give it a big production, advertise it as a play never advertised before, and build up your fame as an emotional actor."

"What will you not play the convict?"

"Of course not. There is only one actor in America who can play 'John Esterbrook'."

Andrew rushed across the room in a blind fury. He stretched out his hand and dealt Wentworth a stinging blow across the mouth. "That actor won't play it. Do you understand?"

Wentworth lifted his arm fiercely, then it dropped nervelessly by his side. The veins rose in his neck and forehead like taut cords. He stood staring at Merry, who strode about the room in a demoniac fury.

"God! You're not a man! You're a damned, low-down, scurriously black-jack. And to think of you standing there, looking me in the face—God! Merry raised his hand again as if to strike, then he dropped it by his side, shuddered, and dashed across the room. He picked up his hat and turned to the door.

"Where are you going?" asked

Enoch sternly.
"I'm going straight to—hell." He lifted his gloves from the table. Beside them lay the manuscript of his play. He stretched out his hand and turned his eyes on the other man, warning him as a thief might, who fears being caught in an act of robbery.

"Take it," cried Enoch. "I have a copy of it, a copy in my own handwriting." Merry stood fingering the pages. "What do you propose to do with your—swag?"

"Call it by a decent name. It belongs to me. Money does not count with me in this transaction. You may take all the royalties. I want nothing but the authorship of the play."

"Nothing but the authorship—Merry's glance was a malediction. He dropped the pages and tossed his hat upon his head. Wentworth watched him curiously. The outer shell of the man had changed. His clothes, immaculate an hour ago, looked disheveled. A lock of fair hair strayed down over his forehead, his linen had a battered appearance, the white hyacinths drooped from his buttonhole like blossoms which had been touched by frost. He stood for a moment with the door-knob in his hand staring at Wentworth, who returned his gaze with a cold, ruthless scrutiny. Merry's eyes fell before them. It was the first palpable concession to Enoch's stronger will.

"Good-by," he said with an unsteady laugh. He closed the door behind him. Wentworth turned to the table, lifted the manuscript and stood glancing through the closely scrawled pages. Then he crossed the room, dropped it upon the red coals, leaned his head upon the mantel, and watched until each gray ash became a filmy atom of dust.

CHAPTER VI.

Stepping Out—Downhill.
"Jaen, this is nobody I know," Wentworth sat staring at a card his maid laid before him. He knitted his brows querulously. "Make him understand that I'm engaged."

"He's terrible masterful, Marso Enoch," said the darky apologetically; "he's bound he'll see you. He's a gentleman all right. I don't believe I kin git rid of him easy."

"Tell him I can spare ten minutes." Jason ushered the visitor into Wentworth's library. He was a tall, distinguished man, with a fine, highbrowed face. His manners were exceedingly gracious, yet simple.

"I don't believe, Mr. Oswald, I've met you before," said Enoch. "You haven't," Grant Oswald smiled cordially. "Your man tells me you have exactly ten minutes to spare. I'll go straight to business. I'm an Englishman. I have been in New York for three weeks. I want to invest money in something along the theatrical line."

"Oh," Enoch looked up sharply. "Andrew Merry mentioned you."

"Yes, I spoke to Merry one night on the elevated. He's one of your few American actors whom I admire. If a play could be found that fitted him—he spoke of having one—I'm willing to venture a hundred thousand dollars on its production."

"A hundred thousand! That would be a production worth while!" "But—remember—only if the play appeals to me. I've been studying theatrical business since I was a youngster. I never threw money away on it."

"If you can stay I will read you the play now." "My ten minutes are up," The Englishman smiled.

"This work can wait. Excuse me a minute," Wentworth lifted a heap of clippings and copy which littered his table. Then he walked to the safe and knelt before it. He had just opened the door and laid his hand upon the manuscript when the door opened and Dorcas ran in. Jason followed, carrying a suit case. For a minute Wentworth forgot the visitor in his inner room.

"Bless my heart, I'm glad to have you back," he cried. "Never in all my life have I seen you look so well."

She held him at arm's length and gazed at him critically. "I wish I could say as much for you, Enoch. You look decidedly seedy. I've got to stay right here. I'm the only one who can manage you."

"I beg your pardon, Dorcas, I've a guest here." Her brother led her to the inner room and introduced his caller to her.

"Mr. Oswald and I were having a business talk, Dorcy—not exactly business either. You may stay if you wish and hear a play. I was just going to read to him. If he likes it he will star Andrew Merry in it."

"Oh!" A glow of anticipation shone in the girl's eyes. She laid her coat and hat on the window seat and dropped into a low chair beside her brother. Once or twice she patted him affectionately on the shoulder.

The Englishman watched her. There was vivid admiration in his eyes, but Dorcas did not see it. Her only thought was of the happiness in store for Merry.

Wentworth laid the pages of manuscript on the table and cleared his throat. Oswald sat ready to bestow a business-like attention upon the reading. When Enoch lifted the first page his visitor asked: "May I know who wrote the play?"

"I did," answered Wentworth quietly. "Ah!" said the Englishman. He noticed the startled look on Dorcas' face. It escaped her brother, who sat turned half way from her.

Wentworth began to read. He was an excellent reader; his enunciation was slow and distinct. The story quickly unfolded itself in strong, vivid language. Grant Oswald, who was an ardent student of dramatic literature, fell immediately under its spell and listened with intent quiet.

The minds of both men were so vitally concentrated upon the drama that they were scarcely conscious of a movement when Dorcas crept from her low chair to the window seat. She lay back against a pillow, gathered the folds of a silky portiere around her, and stared down at the square. She heard her brother's voice in fragments. Those fragments were always the words of the girl, Cordelia, or of the father fallen to pitiful estate. She clasped her hands together with such a grip that it numbed her fingers. A strange pain and a horrible suspicion were seeping through her body and burning in her veins. Outwardly she was inert.

Suddenly she was awake again, wide awake, tingling with life and emotion, listening to her brother's vibrant voice. The day of release had come for John Esterbrook. He stood with halting, tremulous steps, fearful at the sight of the world he had left twenty years before, hiding his eyes from the tumult. Then Cordelia ran to meet him—young, hopeful, loving and eager. Dorcas forgot the horror and doubt which had swept her down for a moment, she was thinking of nothing but the play. It was greater, more human, than she had dreamed of that day when Andrew and she walked home over the beach at Juniper Point. Her eyes grew wet with pity, then she smiled happily as life ceased to be a problem for Cordelia. Love had come, and the father turned to work out what was left him of a future.

Dinner Stories

In a hotel the other day the manager was instructing a new arrival, who hailed from Erin's Isle, in his duties.

"Now, you see this sign, 'Gentlemen must use the spittoons.' If you notice any of the guests violating that rule report the matter to me."

"O' will, sor," said Pat, and he kept a sharp lookout. After watching a gentleman for half an hour he went to him and said:

"D'ye mind the sign over yonder, sor?" "Yes," said the gentleman. "Why don't you observe it, thin?" "I'm not expectorating on the carpet," said the gentleman, astonished.

"O' know ye're not," said Pat, "as ye're not usin' the spittoon, nay, ther, Spit, ye that's, or O'll report ye."

Mary, the domestic servant, employed in a suburban household, the members whereof are not on the most amicable of terms, recently tendered her resignation, much to the distress of the lady of the house.

"So you are going to leave us?" asked the mistress, sadly. "What's the matter, Mary? Haven't we always treated you like one of the family?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Mary, "indeed, I have, and I've stood it as long as I'm going to."

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, June 15, 1874.—At the request of numerous citizens interested in the celebration of the Declaration of Independence, a meeting to make arrangements is scheduled for tomorrow, Tuesday evening, at eight o'clock, in the common council chambers. Everybody should attend. The meeting has been delayed pending the reply of Hon. Matt. Carpenter, which was received today and is published in this issue. To give one of their highly popular minstrels from a Chicago opera house, now on a travelling excursion, for four weeks have concluded to give one of their highly popular entertainments at the opera house in this city on Monday, June twenty-second. This company is well and favorably known throughout the northwest, and is the only permanently located troupe west of New York, which fact alone insures its superior merit. General James Blinthe is announced as one of the speakers at the editorial convention which will open tomorrow in Milwaukee. Frank Applegarth and Mary, his mother, were arrested on Saturday on a charge of assault upon Patrick Ludden by striking him with a hoe and other weapons. Washington Engine Company No. 1 will prepare for the Fourth of July celebration by tripping "the light fantastic toe" on the evening of the third of July. The rotary engine will be distanced immensely by the hundreds of rotaries who will take part in the round dances on that evening. The convention of the State Medical Association will commence its sessions tomorrow in the local court house. Jackson street First M. E. church social will be held at Mitchell's Hall on Wednesday evening next. Bower City Band will there playing around an island of strawberries kept cool by delicious creams.

HEY-YOU BIG-STIFF-COME BACK AND FIGHT LIKE A MAN!

AND HE DID!

Improved on Old Superstition. The first time pigs cross your threshold make them jump over your pants' belt, or your wife's garter, or the maid's apron; then they will come home regularly. A plan now in use among up-to-date American farmers is to keep the pigs in regular pens and feed them twice a day. It is regarded as a scheme more popular with the wife and the maid. The other way is recorded as being a German one.
